Angelman Takes Flight with Help of Strata 3Dpro

Amazing new Children's book illustrated with cutting edge 3D graphics

St. George, Utah, August 28, 2003 — Strata, the trail-blazing company dedicated to adding a creative new dimension to the designers toolset, is proud to announce the publishing of “Angelman”, a children’s book completely illustrated using Strata 3Dpro. French artist Matthieu Roussel once worked in traditional materials – until he discovered Strata.

Angelman is the clever story of a retired superhero who longs to take to the skies again – and the young boy who discovers and inspires him. Like Mr. Angel, Matt also found his wings, but in the form of 3D graphics software from Strata.

“I used to be a robot – drawing, painting, modeling clay, shaping aluminum, cutting cardboard, then I discovered Strata 3Dpro. It gave me total control over my creations with its intuitive environment. Furthermore, it allows me to work in new directions, expressing images matching my own way of life.”

In the story, Mr. Angel toils away in his secret workshop to recreate his super suit. To bring Angelman to life, Matt’s tool of choice has helped him soar to new heights: “My productivity increased tenfold. But more important is the flexibility. My style changes constantly, following my moods and my desires. There’s an old saying ‘There are no bad tools, only bad craftsmen’ but I must add ‘A good tool helps a lot’.”

Publisher Sarbacane Editions describes Angelman as a “serious and touching modern tale that presents the superheroes’ universe in an unusual way that will appeal to boys and girls alike. A source of amazement and wonder, the exceptional three-dimensional illustrations bring magic leaping into our lives.”
